Excerpt: .with joy, not merely as a custom or form, but from feeling the actual need of it in their souls, the public services which are celebrated in their churches. Not satisfied with that, they delight for the most part in attending also private meetings for edification, which are held in almost all the churches where there is a truly faithful minister, and where there are truly converted souls. It is, however, to be regretted, that the habit of having evening services is not more common in France, and especially at Paris. The public celebration of the Sabbath is well begun there, but it is not concluded in so serious and impressive a manner as on the other side of the Channel. This, doubtless, results from the habits of our ancestors, who, persecuted at the origin of the Reformation, and even later, were compelled by...
