BOOK II. a mark the character of the age, I shall relate. . iA considerable part of the gold and jewels, belonging to the church of Laon, had been stolen. The thief could not be discovered; whereupon a general meeting of the canons and principal citizens was called. Uncertain what to do, they unanimously agreed to take the opinion of Anselm, who was esteemed the oracle of the town. Anselm, deeply versed in the law and prophets, revolves the whole business in his mind, and recollects at last the passage in the book of Joshua, where i. t is related a in what manner, a secret theft had been detected by the casting of lots. It is my advice, said a he, having weighed the matter most deliberately, a that you try to discover the author of this horrid a crime by the ordeal of water. Let an infant be 3 taken from each parish, and cast into a vessel of holy water: from the child which sinks, will the guilty pariss be known. Then from each a house of this parish take another infant; which will lhow you the guilty house. You can be no longer at a loss: throw every man and woman a belonging to the house...
